TERRIBLE FIGHTING ALONG THE COAST NEAR DIXMUDE

ALLIES MAY FALL BACK

Due to German Capture of Dixmude.

LOSSES ARE ENORMOUS

Fury of Fighting Seldom, if Ever, Has Been Equaled.

London, Nov. 12.—Behind Dixmude, captured by the Germans, is the direct road to Dunkirk, one of the French ports on which the Germans have set their hearts and if they can break through here the allies will be compelled to fall back to new positions.

The invaders, therefore, have been concentrating their forces at this point and their success in taking Dixmude, where they say they have captured 500 prisoners, and positions to the west of Langemereck, where, according to the Berlin report, 2,000 prisoners fell into their hands, shows that the statements so freely made that they have been sending troops from the west to Poland are without foundation.

As a matter of fact military men here believe the Germans, as soon as they saw it was impossible to carry out their design of capturing Warsaw, dispatched troops from that region to the west, not imagining that the Russian pursuit could be carried out with the rapidity with which it has been.

Terrible Conflict Raging.

The country between Dixmude and Ypres, where the belligerents have been engaged in violent attacks and counter attacks for weeks, and where the losses have been heavier even than those in the battle of the Yser, is again the scene of a battle which, for fury, seldom, if ever, has been equaled.

At other points along the battle front in France the French official communication claims some successes for the allies, but the German headquarters staff asserts that all attacks have been repulsed.

It is considered certain that with the enormous forces required for the effort to get through to the coast and to protect their own country from Russian invasion the Germans will not be able to throw any additional troops into the lines which stretch through Northern France and along the Franco-German border.

On the other hand the French, whose army is growing daily, might attempt an offensive against Lorraine or Alsace as a diversion which would relieve the pressure in the west.

Serious German Defeat.

The Germans, according to Petrograd dispatches, have suffered a more serious defeat on the East Prussian border than the official statements have disclosed. Advice from the Russian capital say that in the recent fighting there the Russians have captured more than 20,000 prisoners, together with quantities of guns and munitions.

The Russian advance in Poland, which has been at the rate of fourteen miles a day, has astonished the military experts and it is not surprising to hear that they are picking up many footsore and weary German stragglers. This advance of horse, foot, and artillery has continued eighteen days.

In Galicia the Russians continue to push the Austrians back, but the Austrians are having their revenge along the Serbian border, which they threaten to cross in an endeavor to crush Serbia before Russia can come to her assistance.

Woman Slain From Ambush.

Iola, Kan., Nov. 12.—Mrs. Roy Ard, the bride of a wealthy young farmer, was shot and killed from ambush while driving home in a motor car with her husband. A rifle was used by the assassin. The tragedy followed numerous threats against the young couple.

Bomb Kills Thirteen Chinese.

Canton, China, Nov. 12.—Another bomb outrage committed by Chinese revolutionaries occurred outside the residence of General Chi-Kung-Lung, who is in charge of the Canton district. Thirteen persons lost their lives.

CAPTAIN VON MULLER.

German Cruiser Emden.
Commander of Famous

CAPTAIN VON MULLER ALIVE

Commander of Cruiser Emden Now a British Prisoner.

London, Nov. 12.—Captain von Muller of the German cruiser Emden, which was attacked by the Australian cruiser Sydney and driven ashore in the Cocos island, where it burned; and Prince Franz Joseph of Hohenzollern, one of his officers, are prisoners of war, and neither is wounded, according to an announcement by the admiralty.

The admiralty adds that the losses on the Emden are unofficially reported as 200 killed and thirty wounded.

The admiralty has given directions that all honors of war be accorded to the survivors of the Emden and that the captain and his officers are not to be deprived of their swords.

DECLARES BRITISH EMPIRE IS ON TRIAL

Premier Asquith Discusses War in House of Commons.

London, Nov. 12.—In a speech delivered in the house of commons after the opening of parliament Premier Asquith declared that he doubts that the war will last as long as some persons originally predicted, but that it will last long is certain.

"However, the longer it lasts," continued the premier, "the more the great resources and strength which the empire possesses will be available to fill the gaps, to replace the losses and maintain our position. The empire is on trial and the experiences of the last three months have inspired us with the confident hope that the longer the trial lasts the more clearly will we emerge from it as the champions of a just cause."

Mr. Asquith expressed warm appreciation of the support which the government has received from all parties.

SLAYS GIRL IN BEDROOM

Jealousy Said to Have Prompted Duluth Killing.

Duluth, Nov. 12.—Stealing into the home of Morris K. Widdes about midnight Mike Mieselberg, twenty-four years old, it is charged, shot and killed Sarah Berson, twenty-five years old, a domestic, in her bedroom. The girl recently jilted Mieselberg for another. Jealousy is said to have prompted the murder. Mieselberg was captured on the interstate bridge by the toll collector. The police say he has confessed the murder.

RUSSIAN LOAN IS SUCCESS

Internal Issue of $255,000,000 Is More Than Subscribed.

London, Nov. 12.—The Russian internal loan issue of 500,000,000 roubles ($255,000,000) is a success, the amount required being more than covered. This statement is made in a dispatch to Reuter's Telegram company from Petrograd.

Special to The Dispatch:—

Paris, Nov. 12, 11:45 A. M.—Terrible fighting along the coast and through Dixmude to the River Lys continued today with the Germans endeavoring to drive the Allied force from Lombaertzyde, north of Nieuport. The Allies still hold the district about Dixmude.

GERMANS NOW 50 MILES FROM CALAIS

Special to The Dispatch:—

London, Nov. 12, 2:57 P. M.—The Germans are showing renewed activity in West Flanders. With Dixmude in their possession the invaders today are less than 50 miles from Calais and much nearer Dunkirk and the fight they have been waging in the face of tremendous losses seems to bear out the statement that they will not abandon this struggle to reach the coast unless utterly crushed.

MEXICAN WAR RIFFLE NEAR MEXICO CITY

Special to Dispatch:—

Vera Cruz, Nov. 12, 11:45 A. M.—Higino Aguilar, supported by General Benjamin Argumendo and a contingent of Zapata followers, is attacking Poublo, 60 miles southeast of Mexico City.

FERGUSON IS NOT GUILTY

Slayer of Former North Dakota Boy Goes Free in Canada.

Hannah, N. D., Nov. 12.—Robert Ferguson, aged twenty, accused of the murder of William Lachner, aged fifteen years, formerly of Wales, N. D., at Scott, Sask., has been acquitted.

Back of the killing lies a story. Ferguson is a former employee of Joe Lachner, the father of William Lachner. From the evidence introduced at the trial it appears that Mrs. Lachner became infatuated with young Ferguson while he was working on their farm, with the result that he was ordered from the place.

During the absence of the elder Lachner Ferguson returned and it was then that the boy was shot and killed. Ferguson pleaded that the affair was accidental.

JAPAN UNITES IN PRAYERS FOR PEACE.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Prayers for peace were offered in Japan in response to President Wilson's peace Sunday proclamation last month, though Japan is one of the belligerent powers in the great war.

Word of this came to the American Red Cross headquarters here in a letter from M. S. Togo, secretary of the Japanese Red Cross.

OFFICERS AND CREW SAVED

German Submarine Torpedoes Small British Gunboat.

London, Nov. 12.—The little British torpedo gunboat Niger, which was built twenty-two years ago and has been used as a tender, is the latest victim of the German submarines. She was torpedoed in the Downs, north of the Straits of Dover, and foundered immediately. The officers and crew were saved. Four men were injured.

The Niger has been employed in semi-combatant duties. It carried a complement of eighty-five men. The gunboat was built in 1892. It had a displacement of 819 tons and was 230 feet long.

AUTO MAKERS ARE ACCUSED

Three Officials of Insolvent Savage Company Indicted.

Detroit, Nov. 12.—Indictments were returned by the federal grand jury here against Edwin E. Taylor, Robert W. Fishback and Delbert H. Cummings, officers of the insolvent Savage Motor Car company, charged with using the mails to defraud.

Fifteen witnesses from Wisconsin and Iowa testified before the grand jury they had paid the Savage Motor Car company from $100 to $800 on motor cars they never received.

It is said the three men are now awaiting trial in Cincinnati on a similar charge.

CARRANZA AND VILLA AT WAR

Another Revolt Has Broken Out in Mexico.

OPPOSING ARMIES ADVANCING

Majority of the Principal Chiefs Are Said to Have Declared in Favor of Carranza and All the South and East Are With Him—Villa Calls on the People to Take Up Arms.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 11.—A dispatch received from Aguas Calientes says that Villa has presented his resignation to President Gutierrez through his acting minister of war and has been appointed commander-in-chief of the entire army of the north.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 12.—War has been declared between the Carranza and Villa elements of the Constitutionalist army, according to advices received at Juarez from officials of the congress of chieftains at Aguas Calientes.

A preliminary battle already has taken place at Leon, between Aguas Calientes and Querataro, it was reported.

General Pablo Gonzales, the Carranza commander, has moved his forces from Querataro north to Silao to meet the Villa advance. General Manuel Chao, a Villa chieftain, departed from Aguas Calientes with a strong column.

A message from official sources in Mexico City, given out by Rafael Muzquiz, the Carranza consul general to the United States, says:

"The first chief is at Cordoba. A majority of the principal chiefs have declared in favor of Carranza. Villa has called on the people to take arms. All the south and east are loyal to the first chief."

EVACUATION OF VERA CRUZ

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan Discuss Question.

Washington, Nov. 12.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan discussed for nearly three hours the question of evacuation of Vera Cruz by the American forces.

No announcement was made at the conclusion of the conference, but it was understood the president decided to await further advices as to the political situation in Mexico.

In official circles generally it is believed that, while the president will order the evacuation, he may wait a few days for a definite alignment of the various chiefs in the latest civil war.

The American government is on record in diplomatic correspondence as promising the withdrawal of the troops when the guarantees it requested were complied with.

GERMAN CASUALTY LIST BEARS 509,000 NAMES.

Copenhagen, Nov. 12.—News dispatches declare a summarized casualty list published in Berlin gives the names of 509,000 officers and men killed, wounded or missing. The list covers part of August, September and a few from October.

One section alone carries 29,281 names.

CANADA CLOSES WATERWAY

Broughton Strait Is Being Fortified for Defense.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 12.—It was officially announced that the western portion of Broughton strait, near Vancouver Island, had been closed to navigation for purposes of defense. Shipping has been notified that vessels between Johnston strait and Queen Charlotte sound must take the Weynton passage and Blackfish sound. Vessels going by way of Ellen point channel are in danger of being fired on, it is announced.

No reason has been assigned officially for this action, but it is understood to be due to apprehension as to possible attack from the German fleet that defeated British warships recently off the coast of Chile.

GOVERNOR HODGES.

Appeals to Kansas Farmers to Aid Starving Belgians.

URGES AID FOR BELGIANS

Governor Hodges Appeals for Donations of Corn and Oats.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 12.—In an appeal to Kansas farmers Governor Hodges urged that they donate 1,000 bushels of wheat and more than 250,000 bushels of corn for the aid of suffering Belgians.

He asks that Thanksgiving day be set aside as a day of giving and urges every crop producer in the state to give a portion equal to one bushel of wheat or corn for every 200 bushels produced.

MAKES PROTEST TO STATE DEPARTMENT

Britain Claims South American Nations Are Unneutral.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Responsibility for enforcing the neutrality of the South American republics in the European war may be thrust upon the United States as a result of the construction of the Monroe doctrine the British government seems to have made in submitting to Washington charges of unneutral acts by the governments of Ecuador and Colombia.

Instead of taking the alleged violations of neutrality directly up with the two South American countries the British government, it became known, has spoken first with the government of the United States.

Great Britain's move is interpreted here as a strong hint that the United States should take upon itself to call the alleged acts to the attention of the governments in question with a view to preventing their future repetition.

The inference is plain that unless the United States does act Great Britain will feel free to proceed directly to demand explanations of the Colombian and Ecuadorian governments. The charges against Ecuador and Colombia concern aid alleged to have been given German warships in the Pacific by these countries.

NOTHING NOBLE IN WAR

But President Says It Develops Admirable Characters.

Washington, Nov. 12.—President Wilson, speaking at the unveiling of a statue to General Philip Kearney at Arlington national cemetery, declared that "there is nothing noble or admirable in war itself, but there is something very noble and admirable occasionally in the causes for which war is undertaken, and there is something very noble and admirable in some of the characters which war develops."

"If a man's character can go through the fire and come out resplendent," said the president, "then you know that it is of the true quality of the best human stuff."

Mr. Wilson said General Kearney typified the best kind of leader produced by the United States, adding that "there has been many another man who stood alongside of him with the same qualities and the same distinction of service."

ORDERS SALOONS CLOSED NOV. 30

Special Agent Busy in Northern Minnesota.

AFFECTS FIFTY-NINE TOWNS

About Two Hundred Bars in the Territory Covered by the Chippewa Indian Treaty of 1855 Are Given Final and Short Notice to Go Out of Business.

Benidji, Minn., Nov. 12.—Acting for Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs, Special Agent Henry A. Larson of the Indian department at Washington issued an order here that all saloons included in the territory affected by the Chippewa treaty of 1855 must close their doors by Nov. 30. About 200 saloons in fifty-nine towns are affected. Drug stores which sell liquor also come under the order.

Action of the government, following the recent decision by the United States supreme court that the provisions prohibiting the sale of liquor under the treaty of 1855 are valid, first became known when Special Agent Larson and his deputies arrived here from a trip through the affected district.

By personal notification they told the saloonists that they must close their doors by the end of the month.

While liquor interests here and elsewhere in the affected district have held out hope that the government would not actually close the saloons, but would keep strict watch for law violations in regard to liquor sales to Indians, they anticipated the closing order after a conference of officials and Special Agent Larson when he arrived at Benidji from Washington.

Seals Fate of Liquor District.

When the government agent refused to state the nature of his trip to Northern Minnesota the impression prevailed that the fate of the liquor district had been sealed. The towns affected by the order are:

Barrow, Benidji, Big Falls, Big Fork, Boyer, Brainerd, Buhl, Calloway, Calumet, Cass Lake, Chisholm, Cohasset, Coleraine, Crosby, Cuyuna, Deer River, Deerwood, Dent, Detroit, Federal Dam, Floodwood, Frazee, Funkley, Gemmell, Georgetown, Grand Rapids, Hibbing, Holman, Iron Hub, Ironwood, Jenkins, Keewatin, Kelleher, Kelly Falls, Lude, Marble, Mizpah, Nashua, New York Mills, Northome, Nymore, Ogema, Oreland, Otter Tail, Park Rapids, Perham, Pillager, Sebeka, Shovel, Solway, Stevenson, Ten Strike, Turtle River, Verna, Walker, Warba and Wilton.

The order comes as the close of long arguments, hearings and speculation concerning the treaty of 1855, which is one of six dealing with Indian problems.

Benidji, one of the largest towns to be affected, has twenty-one saloons, with two at Nymore, a suburb. Hibbing is the largest town in the territory.

IS REDUCED ONE-FOURTH

World's Sea Trade Greatly Affected by the War.

New York, Nov. 12.—Shipping men estimate that the volume of the world's maritime commerce has been decreased in the neighborhood of 25 per cent by the war.

The heaviest part of the loss falls on Germany and Austria, but hardly a nation does not feel the restrictions imposed on shipping by the hazards of war and the falling away of international trade.

Notwithstanding the lessened danger to vessels of the allied and neutral nations since most of the German warships have been driven from the high seas movements of merchantmen still are attended with more or less secrecy.

GUILTY OF WHITE SLAVERY

Former Editor of Religious Paper Is Convicted.

Cleveland, Nov. 12.—Anzel M. Mlynarczyk, fifty-nine years old, former editor of a religious paper, was found guilty of white slavery by a jury in federal court. He was charged with having brought Lydia Selmar, twenty years old, from her home at Coal Center, Pa., to this city and having kept her a prisoner in his home. Sentence has not been pronounced.

NOTHING NOBLE IN WAR

But President Says It Develops Admirable Characters.

Washington, Nov. 12.—President Wilson, speaking at the unveiling of a statue to General Philip Kearney at Arlington national cemetery, declared that "there is nothing noble or admirable in war itself, but there is something very noble and admirable occasionally in the causes for which war is undertaken, and there is something very noble and admirable in some of the characters which war develops."

"If a man's character can go through the fire and come out resplendent," said the president, "then you know that it is of the true quality of the best human stuff."

Mr. Wilson said General Kearney typified the best kind of leader produced by the United States, adding that "there has been many another man who stood alongside of him with the same qualities and the same distinction of service."

ORDERS SALOONS CLOSED NOV. 30

Special Agent Busy in Northern Minnesota.

AFFECTS FIFTY-NINE TOWNS

About Two Hundred Bars in the Territory Covered by the Chippewa Indian Treaty of 1855 Are Given Final and Short Notice to Go Out of Business.

Benidji, Minn., Nov. 12.—Acting for Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs, Special Agent Henry A. Larson of the Indian department at Washington issued an order here that all saloons included in the territory affected by the Chippewa treaty of 1855 must close their doors by Nov. 30. About 200 saloons in fifty-nine towns are affected. Drug stores which sell liquor also come under the order.

Action of the government, following the recent decision by the United States supreme court that the provisions prohibiting the sale of liquor under the treaty of 1855 are valid, first became known when Special Agent Larson and his deputies arrived here from a trip through the affected district.

By personal notification they told the saloonists that they must close their doors by the end of the month.

While liquor interests here and elsewhere in the affected district have held out hope that the government would not actually close the saloons, but would keep strict watch for law violations in regard to liquor sales to Indians, they anticipated the closing order after a conference of officials and Special Agent Larson when he arrived at Benidji from Washington.

Seals Fate of Liquor District.

When the government agent refused to state the nature of his trip to Northern Minnesota the impression prevailed that the fate of the liquor district had been sealed. The towns affected by the order are:

Barrow, Benidji, Big Falls, Big Fork, Bovey, Brainerd, Buhl, Callaway, Calumet, Cass Lake, Chisholm, Cohasset, Coleraine, Crosby, Cuyuna, Deer River, Deerwood, Dent, Detroit, Federal Dam, Floodwood, Frazee, Funkley, Gemmill, Georgetown, Grand Rapids, Hibbing, Holman, Iron Hub, Irontown, Jenkins, Kewatin, Kelleher, Kelly Falls, Lude, Marble, Mizpah, Nashauk, New York Mills, Northome, Nymore, Ogema, Oreland, Otter Tail, Park Rapids, Perham, Pillager, Sebeka, Shewlin, Solway, Stevenson, Ten Strike, Turtle River, Verna, Walker, Warba and Wilton.

The order comes as the close of long arguments, hearings and speculation concerning the treaty of 1855, which is one of six dealing with Indian problems.

Benidji, one of the largest towns to be affected, has twenty-one saloons, with two at Nymore, a suburb. Hibbing is the largest town in the territory.

IS REDUCED ONE-FOURTH

World's Sea Trade Greatly Affected by the War.

New York, Nov. 12.—Shipping men estimate that the volume of the world's maritime commerce has been decreased in the neighborhood of 25 per cent by the war.

The heaviest part of the loss falls on Germany and Austria, but hardly a nation does not feel the restrictions imposed on shipping by the hazards of war and the falling away of international trade.

Notwithstanding the lessened danger to vessels of the allied and neutral nations since most of the German warships have been driven from the high seas movements of merchantmen still are attended with more or less secrecy.

GUILTY OF WHITE SLAVERY

Former Editor of Religious Paper Is Convicted.

Cleveland, Nov. 12.—Anzel M. Mlynarczyk, fifty-nine years old, former editor of a religious paper, was found guilty of white slavery by a jury in federal court. He was charged with having brought Lydia Selmer, twenty years old, from her home at Coal Center, Pa., to this city and having kept her a prisoner in his home. Sentence has not been pronounced.

A BRAINERD BOOSTER
Nick Christoff, Shoe Shine Parlors, Boosts the Brainerd Cigar Business
Lessons may be found in out of the way places. Boosting for Brainerd is sometimes done by some of the smallest industries.
Take for example Nick Christoff and his shoe shining parlors on S. Sixth street. Nick carries cigars and when one examines the case one finds this:
Cigars made by Brainerd cigar-makers, 7 boxes. Out of town brands 2 boxes. And Nick says the Brainerd cigars are the best sellers every time. The proportion of home made cigars to foreign cigars, 7 to 2, is a greater percentage for home boosting than many other cigar stands in the city.

"Pape's Cold Compound" Ends Cold and Grippe in Few Hours—Tastes Nice—Acts Gently
Your cold will break and all gripe misery end after taking a dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until three doses are taken.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing! Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Accept no substitute.—Advt.

A Curious Superstition.
Many Greeks firmly believe to this day in a curious heathen notion, which holds that the fate of every child is controlled entirely by three mysterious spirits, who are spoken of collectively as the "moorai." These three "fates" are supposed to be invisible women, who come on a visit of inspection shortly after the birth of each child. They always come after sundown, says the superstition, and the Greek parents when a newly born baby is in the house and a visit from the "moorai" is expected carefully leave the door open and lay a feast and money offerings all ready for the "fates" when they should arrive.

Laughed and Won.
When the British were storming Badajoz the Duke of Wellington rode up and, observing an artilleryman particularly active, inquired the man's name. He was answered "Taylor."
"A very good name too," said the duke. "Cheer up, my men! Our Taylor will soon make a pair of breaches in the walls!"
At this sally the men forgot their danger, a burst of laughter broke from them and the next charge carried the fortress.—London Answers.

Nest Eggs For Jam Pots.
When a large glass jar of jam or preserves is opened and it is not the housekeeper's desire to use it all at once she is often in a quandary to know how to dispose of what is left when the first few spoonfuls have been removed. The best method yet suggested is this:
Let the housekeeper have a small stock of china nest eggs, which can be bought for about a cent apiece. When she removes part of the contents of a jar let her drop into it enough of the china eggs to raise the contents to the top again; then replace the cover. Of course the china eggs should be dipped into boiling water first in order that they may not introduce the germs of decay.—New York World.

Make it thy business to know thyself, which is the most difficult lesson in the world.—Cervantes.

Study It Out.
Here is a highly interesting paradox, which may amuse or bewilder, as the case may be. It is supposed to have been invented by Socrates: A. says that all Athenians are liars. A. is an Athenian and therefore a liar. Therefore his statement that all Athenians are liars is not true, and consequently all Athenians tell the truth. A. is an Athenian and hence tells the truth, wherefore his statement that all Athenians are liars is true. Therefore he is a liar and his statement false, and so on.

More Than One Trafalgar Square.
The Scotland Yard examination which would be taxicab drivers have to undergo in the knowledge of London is no mere matter of form. "If," asked the inquisitor recently of a candidate, "a fare hails you in Trafalgar square and asks to be driven to Trafalgar square, what would you do?" "I should drive him around a bit and drop him on the other side of the square," replied the candidate. And he was turned down, for he did not know that London has three Trafalgar squares besides the finest site in Europe—one in Camberwell, another in Chelsea and still another one in Stepney.—London Chronicle.

Logical.
"A woman can't do two things at once," snapped Mrs. Gabb.
"That's the reason why there is never any needlework done at a sewing club," growled Mr. Gabb.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Real Thing.
"Briggs is wonderfully proud of his wife. He says she's a natural contortionist."
"Why does he think so?"
"He says she can fasten her waist up the back."
"Yes?"
"And that she always sits on a chair when she puts on her shoes."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Nick Christoff, Shoe Shine Parlors, Boosts the Brainerd Cigar Business
Lessons may be found in out of the way places. Boosting for Brainerd is sometimes done by some of the smallest industries.
Take for example Nick Christoff and his shoe shining parlors on S. Sixth street. Nick carries cigars and when one examines the case one finds this:
Cigars made by Brainerd cigar-makers, 7 boxes. Out of town brands 2 boxes. And Nick says the Brainerd cigars are the best sellers every time. The proportion of home made cigars to foreign cigars, 7 to 2, is a greater percentage for home boosting than many other cigar stands in the city.

A Curious Superstition.
Many Greeks firmly believe to this day in a curious heathen notion, which holds that the fate of every child is controlled entirely by three mysterious spirits, who are spoken of collectively as the "moral." These three "fates" are supposed to be invisible women, who come on a visit of inspection shortly after the birth of each child. They always come after sundown, says the superstition, and the Greek parents when a newly born baby is in the house and a visit from the "moral" is expected carefully leave the door open and lay a feast and money offerings all ready for the "fates" when they should arrive.
Laughed and Won.
When the British were storming Badajoz the Duke of Wellington rode up and, observing an artilleryman particularly active, inquired the man's name. He was answered "Taylor."
"A very good name too," said the duke. "Cheer up, my men! Our Taylor will soon make a pair of breaches in the walls!"
At this sally the men forgot their danger, a burst of laughter broke from them and the next charge carried the fortress.—London Answers.
Nest Eggs For Jam Pots.
When a large glass jar of jam or preserves is opened and it is not the housekeeper's desire to use it all at once she is often in a quandary to know how to dispose of what is left when the first few spoonfuls have been removed. The best method yet suggested is this:
Let the housekeeper have a small stock of china nest eggs, which can be bought for about a cent apiece. When she removes part or the contents of a jar let her drop into it enough of the china eggs to raise the contents to the top again; then replace the cover. Of course the china eggs should be dipped into boiling water first in order that they may not introduce the germs of decay.—New York World.

Study It Out.
Here is a highly interesting paradox, which may amuse or bewilder, as the case may be. It is supposed to have been invented by Socrates: A says that all Athenians are liars. A is an Athenian and therefore a liar. Therefore his statement that all Athenians are liars is not true, and consequently all Athenians tell the truth. A is an Athenian and hence tells the truth, wherefore his statement that all Athenians are liars is true. Therefore he is a liar and his statement false, and so on.
More Than One Trafalgar Square.
The Scotland Yard examination which would be taxicab drivers have to undergo in the knowledge of London is no mere matter of form. "If," asked the inquisitor recently of a candidate, "a fare hails you in Trafalgar square and asks to be driven to Trafalgar square, what would you do?" "I should drive him around a bit and drop him on the other side of the square," replied the candidate. And he was turned down, for he did not know that London has three Trafalgar squares besides the finest site in Europe—one in Camberwell, another in Chelsea and still another one in Stepney.—London Chronicle.
Logical.
"A woman can't do two things at once," snapped Mrs. Gabb.
"That's the reason why there is never any needlework done at a sewing club," growled Mr. Gabb.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
The Real Thing.
"Briggs is wonderfully proud of his wife. He says she's a natural contortionist."
"Why does he think so?"
"He says she can fasten her waist up the back."
"Yes?"
"And that she always sits on a chair when she puts on her shoes."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

VOTE DEATH TO FIFTEEN.

Arizona Women Help to Seal Fate of Reprieved Prisoners.

Fifteen persons convicted of murders were automatically sentenced to death by popular vote in Arizona, and thousands of women voters were instrumental in sealing their fate.

One of the amendments voted upon proposed the abolition of capital punishment, and as a result of its being submitted to the voters it was decided to grant a reprieve to fifteen persons already under sentence of death and in the penitentiary.

At the polls the proposition was completely voted down by both women and men, who were engaged in voting the state dry and gave the other amendment but little consideration.

SHOOTS GIRL THREE TIMES

Maid in Superior Family Attacked by Man She Rejected.

Superior, Wis., Nov. 12.—Mike Mieselberg shot and probably fatally wounded Sarah Berson, a domestic at the home of Morris J. Wildes. Unrequited love was the cause.

Mieselberg stole his way into the house, reached the girl's room and shot her three times. She was aroused by his entrance and rushed for the door. The Wildes family was awakened, but Mieselberg, menacing them with a revolver, escaped. He was later captured on the interstate bridge by the toll collector whom he offered $20 to let him go.

Mieselberg asserts that the girl, who has been going with him for several months, rejected him for another man. He expresses no regret for the deed, saying he would rather kill her than permit her to be another man's wife. Mieselberg is twenty-four and the girl is twenty-three.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Advt.

WOMAN'S REALM

A SUCCESSFUL BAZAAR

Young Ladies Sodality of St. Francis Catholic Church Cleared $200 Last Night

The bazaar given by the Young Ladies Sodality of St. Francis Catholic church at the church basement Wednesday evening was a most successful function, $200 being realized.

The young ladies to the number of fifty worked faithfully to make it a success and their efforts were rewarded in large measure. Commencing at 4 o'clock in the afternoon many of the children of the city attended. From 7 o'clock on in the evening the adults visited the bazaar and inspected the pretty booths, all artistically arranged and each in charge of the girls.

It would be difficult to tell which booth was the most popular. One vied with the other in attractiveness. The large handsome doll donated by the H. F. Michael company was won by Mrs. P. J. Oberst.

The Young Ladies Sodality is composed of ladies ranging in age from 16 to 29 and that is an age in a girl's life when she can work like a busy bee if she makes up her mind to do so and they certainly did so on Wednesday evening.

They wish, in conclusion, to thank the many people who assisted to make their bazaar the great success it was.

FOR BELGIAN REFUGEES

Miss Clara Hill, of St. Paul, Daughter of James J. Hill, Starts Relief Fund

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 12.—More than 7,000,000 Belgians are now refugees in England, France and Holland. They are without shelter or food. United States Ambassador Page at London has cabled that thousands of Belgians will starve before the American ships carrying food can reach them.

Thousands more will starve to death this winter unless Americans give the help that is so badly needed. On account of the urgent need relief funds everywhere have been started and many men, women and children will be saved by the prompt work.

Miss Clara Hill, daughter of Jas. J. Hill, is the head of the movement in the northwest. Already Miss Hill has raised $3,000 and she and her committee are working hard to secure immediate help.

The fund raised in the northwest will be used only for the purchase of food. Every dollar will be used and nothing of any kind charged for organization according to Miss Hill. The fund will be disposed of through the American ambassadors in Europe.

Miss Hill Saturday issued the following appeal to the people of the northwest:

As treasurer for the St. Paul Belgian Relief Fund, I appeal to your readers for subscriptions for the starving people of Belgium. Every dollar contributed represents an allowance of flour for one person for two months shipped to the American commission for feeding non-combatants in Belgium. Work directed by American ambassador to Great Britain and American minister to Belgium.

Small subscriptions most gratefully received.

Yours truly,

CLARA A. HILL

Treasurer,

DEMOCRATS HAVE MANY CANDIDATES

If Woodrow Wilson Doesn't Run, Others Are Ready.

CLARK WANTS NOMINATION.

Underwood Has Much Support, and Bryan Still Hopes to Realize Ambition of His Life—War's Effect on Elections—Another Socialist, Meyer London of New York, Elected.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Nov. 12.—[Special.]—It Woodrow Wilson is not the candidate of the Democratic party for president in 1916 then who will it be?

The question has been asked many times since the recent election, and naturally it would be in view of the Baltimore platform, which declared for one term for the president.

But the question has arisen more forcibly since circumstances made it possible that Mr. Wilson will not seek another nomination. In that event there would at once be a number of entries, not as many as appeared in 1912, but still quite a few. It is doubtful whether Marshall of Indiana, Harmon of Ohio, Burke of North Dakota, Foss of Massachusetts, Baldwin of Connecticut and some others who received votes would again be in the race. They and their supporters of that time must know that there is no possibility of their success.

Bryan, Clark or Underwood.

If Wilson is not a candidate to succeed himself then Bryan, Champ Clark or Underwood will be named. William J. Bryan has never given up the hope that he may some time be president. He saw a possibility in 1912, and if he could have known four months in advance that a split in the Republican party was to occur he would have come very near capturing the nomination at Baltimore. As it was, the nomination was not so very far out of his reach.

Champ Clark believes he was robbed of the nomination at Baltimore. He has said that nothing would prevent Wilson's nomination in 1916 and that if Wilson conducted his administration so as to make his nomination undesirable then the nomination would not be worth having. Yet if anything should occur to keep Mr. Wilson out of the race Champ would be in it very quickly.

As to Underwood, there are thousands of conservative Democrats who hope that he will be the nominee at some time, preferably in 1916.

Hammond a Surprise.

When Winfield S. Hammond decided to try for the governorship instead of remaining in congress most of his friends in the house believed that he was simply seeking a way out; that he had no hope of re-election to congress and that he could get down easy by becoming a candidate for governor. He had a very hard fight to secure the nomination, but seems to have united all the elements of the Democratic party in Minnesota.

At Denver in 1908 Hammond placed Governor John A. Johnson in nomination for president. While he was speaking for Minnesota's candidate the Bryan men attempted to howl him down. They were aided by quite a strong contingent of Minnesota Democrats who preferred Bryan even to the man from their own state, who might have been elected if nominated.

War the Excuse.

Postmaster General Burleson in claiming an overwhelming Democratic victory in the late election said that it was the first time after a tariff revision that the party in power was not defeated except in 1898, and then the Spanish war saved the Republicans. Perhaps that was true, as the saving majority was only eighteen. But there are many political observers who believe that the European war saved the Democrats in the late election.

"Until this war came we were on the toboggan," remarked Senator Newlands of Nevada several weeks ago. I know of very few Democrats expressing their honest sentiments, but not for publication, who do not say that the European war saved them the house of representatives and several senators.

Another Socialist.

Victor Berger of Wisconsin was the first Socialist elected to congress. Now New York sends one. Berger was a jovial chap. He did not take himself too seriously and made many friends in both parties. He didn't accomplish anything for his party except to get a lot of socialistic utterances the freedom of the mails under the franking privilege.

Meyer London, the new Socialist, defeated Henry Goldfogle, a man to whom congressional life was very sweet. Goldfogle liked his job better than anything else. He was always working hard to be re-elected. In 1910 Goldfogle was as good as beaten by a Socialist candidate. Harry Loudenslager, who was running the Republican campaign in the east that year, learning that there was no hope for the Republican candidate, turned enough vote, over to Goldfogle to save him. There was no Harry Loudenslager to turn the same trick this year.

REFERS TO EUROPEAN WAR

Miss Pankhurst Arouses Southern Suffrage Conference.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 12.—Citing the European war as "an instance of the danger and injustice of depriving women of the ballot," Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the English militant, aroused the closing session of the Southern states suffrage conference to an enthusiastic demonstration here.

At its closing business session the conference elected Miss Kate M. Gordon of New Orleans president, and Miss Laura Clay of Kentucky vice president at large, and allowed a declaration of principles to be in committee.

"Women are taking an increasing interest in international affairs," Miss Pankhurst told the conference. "The time has passed when men had a monopoly in understanding international questions. The European war is an instance."

ALLIES ARE AFTER HORSES

Montana Scoured for Mounts for Warring European Troopers.

Missoula, Mont., Nov. 12.—Montana horses are in great demand for the allied European troops and have advanced in value by leaps and bounds in all parts of the Treasure state. In the Beaverhead section, near Dillon, English buyers have paid as much as $75 a head for animals that were considered only fair range horses. A firm at Deer Lodge has signed a contract with the French buyers for the early delivery of 3,000 Montana horses. The order is the largest ever placed at one time in Montana. One owner in southern Montana has agreed to round up 1,000 animals that will meet the requirements of the French inspectors now in the state.

Crushed the Critic.

He was very deferential, but he was a deacon in the church, and he felt that he had a right to criticize.

"I hope you'll pardon me," he said, "if I suggest that your sermons are—ah—"

"Too prosy, I suppose," suggested the minister.

"Oh, no, not that, but too long."

"But you wouldn't blame me for that," returned the minister pleasantly. "If you knew a little more I wouldn't have to tell you so much."—London Scraps.

Bullet Wounds.

The entrance wound caused by the modern small arm bullet is not a gruesome spectacle. It is small, and its appearance has been compared to that produced by the bite of a certain parasite insect. Often there is but little external bleeding, but this is not to be taken as a danger signal, as might be popularly supposed.—London Telegraph.

Soldering Aluminium.

When holes appear in aluminium utensils it is not necessary to discard the dishes as no longer useful, for by a simple method they can be made to take solder. Insert a brass or copper rivet in the hole, flatten both ends and then solder over both the inside and the outside surfaces in the usual manner. If you wish to solder a piece to a sound part of the utensil use a sharp awl to punch holes for holding spots of copper or brass. If the aluminium is very thick cut the holes with a small drill held in a carpenter's bit brace.

VOTE DEATH TO FIFTEEN.

Arizona Women Help to Seal Fate of Reprieved Prisoners.

Fifteen persons convicted of murders were automatically sentenced to death by popular vote in Arizona, and thousands of women voters were instrumental in sealing their fate.

One of the amendments voted upon proposed the abolition of capital punishment, and as a result of its being submitted to the voters it was decided to grant a reprieve to fifteen persons already under sentence of death and in the penitentiary.

At the polls the proposition was completely voted down by both women and men, who were engaged in voting the state dry and gave the other amendment but little consideration.

SHOOTS GIRL THREE TIMES

Maid in Superior Family Attacked by Man She Rejected.

Superior, Wis., Nov. 12.—Mike Mieselberg shot and probably fatally wounded Sarah Berson, a domestic at the home of Morris J. Widdes. Unrequited love was the cause.

Mieselberg stole his way into the house, reached the girl's room and shot her three times. She was aroused by his entrance and rushed for the door. The Widdes family was awakened, but Mieselberg, menacing them with a revolver, escaped. He was later captured on the interstate bridge by the toll collector whom he offered $20 to let him go.

Mieselberg asserts that the girl, who has been going with him for several months, rejected him for another man. He expresses no regret for the deed, saying he would rather kill her than permit her to be another man's wife. Mieselberg is twenty-four and the girl is twenty-three.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Bring back its gloss, lustre, charm and get rid of dandruff—Try the moist cloth

To be possessed of a head of heavy beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Advt.

WOMAN'S REALM

A SUCCESSFUL BAZAAR

Young Ladies Sodality of St. Francis Catholic Church Cleared $200 Last Night

The bazaar given by the Young Ladies Sodality of St. Francis Catholic church at the church basement Wednesday evening was a most successful function, $200 being realized. The young ladies to the number of fifty worked faithfully to make it a success and their efforts were rewarded in large measure. Commencing at 4 o'clock in the afternoon many of the children of the city attended. From 7 o'clock on in the evening the adults visited the bazaar and inspected the pretty booths, all artistically arranged and each in charge of the girls.

It would be difficult to tell which booth was the most popular. One vied with the other in attractiveness. The large handsome doll donated by the H. F. Michael company was won by Mrs. P. J. Oberst.

The Young Ladies Sodality is composed of ladies ranging in age from 16 to 20 and that is an age in a girl's life when she can work like a busy bee if she makes up her mind to do so and they certainly did so on Wednesday evening.

They wish, in conclusion, to thank the many people who assisted to make their bazaar the great success it was.

FOR BELGIAN REFUGEES

Miss Clara Hill, of St. Paul, Daughter of James J. Hill, Starts Relief Fund

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 12.—More than 7,000,000 Belgians are now refugees in England, France and Holland. They are without shelter or food. United States Ambassador Page at London has cabled that thousands of Belgians will starve before the American ships carrying food can reach them.

Thousands more will starve to death this winter unless Americans give the help that is so badly needed. On account of the urgent need relief funds everywhere have been started and many men, women and children will be saved by the prompt work.

Miss Clara Hill, daughter of Jas. J. Hill, is the head of the movement in the northwest. Already Miss Hill has raised $3,000 and she and her committee are working hard to secure immediate help.

The fund raised in the northwest will be used only for the purchase of food. Every dollar will be used and nothing of any kind charged for organization according to Miss Hill. The fund will be disposed of through the American ambassadors in Europe.

Miss Hill Saturday issued the following appeal to the people of the northwest:

As treasurer for the St. Paul Belgian Relief Fund, I appeal to your readers for subscriptions for the starving people of Belgium. Every dollar contributed represents an allowance of flour for one person for two months shipped to the American commission for feeding non-combatants in Belgium. Work directed by American ambassador to Great Britain and American minister to Belgium.

Small subscriptions most gratefully received.

Yours truly,

CLARA A. HILL

Treasurer,

DEMOCRATS HAVE MANY CANDIDATES

If Woodrow Wilson Doesn't Run, Others Are Ready.

CLARK WANTS NOMINATION.

Underwood Has Much Support, and Bryan Still Hopes to Realize Ambition of His Life—War's Effect on Elections—Another Socialist, Meyer, of New York, Elected.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Nov. 12.—[Special.]—It Woodrow Wilson is not the candidate of the Democratic party for president in 1916 then who will it be?

The question has been asked many times since the recent election, and naturally it would be in view of the Baltimore platform, which declared for one term for the president.

But the question has arisen more forcibly since circumstances made it possible that Mr. Wilson will not seek another nomination. In that event there would at once be a number of entries, not as many as appeared in 1912, but still quite a few. It is doubtful whether Marshall of Indiana, Harmon of Ohio, Burke of North Dakota, Foss of Massachusetts, Baldwin of Connecticut and some others who received votes would again be in the race. They and their supporters of that time must know that there is no possibility of their success.

Bryan, Clark or Underwood.

If Wilson is not a candidate to succeed himself then Bryan, Champ Clark or Underwood will be named. William J. Bryan has never given up the hope that he may some time be president. He saw a possibility in 1912, and if he could have known four months in advance that a split in the Republican party was to occur he would have come very near capturing the nomination at Baltimore. As it was, the nomination was not so very far out of his reach.

Champ Clark believes he was robbed of the nomination at Baltimore. He has said that nothing would prevent Wilson's nomination in 1916 and that if Wilson conducted his administration so as to make his nomination undesirable then the nomination would not be worth having. Yet if anything should occur to keep Mr. Wilson out of the race Champ would be in it very quickly.

As to Underwood, there are thousands of conservative Democrats who hope that he will be the nominee at some time, preferably in 1916.

Hammond a Surprise.

When Winfield S. Hammond decided to try for the governorship instead of remaining in congress most of his friends in the house believed that he was simply seeking a way out; that he had no hope of re-election to congress and that he could get down easy by becoming a candidate for governor. He had a very hard fight to secure the nomination, but seems to have united all the elements of the Democratic party in Minnesota.

At Denver in 1908 Hammond placed Governor John A. Johnson in nomination for president. While he was speaking for Minnesota's candidate the Bryan men attempted to howl him down. They were aided by quite a strong contingent of Minnesota Democrats who preferred Bryan even to the man from their own state, who might have been elected if nominated.

War the Excuse.

Postmaster General Burleson in claiming an overwhelming Democratic victory in the late election said that it was the first time after a tariff revision that the party in power was not defeated except in 1898, and then the Spanish war saved the Republicans. Perhaps that was true, as the saving majority was only eighteen. But there are many political observers who believe that the European war saved the Democrats in the late election.

"Until this war came we were on the toboggan," remarked Senator Newlands of Nevada several weeks ago. I know of very few Democrats expressing their honest sentiments, but not for publication, who do not say that the European war saved them the house of representatives and several senators.

Another Socialist.

Victor Berger of Wisconsin was the first Socialist elected to congress. Now New York sends one. Berger was a jovial chap. He did not take himself too seriously and made many friends in both parties. He didn't accomplish anything for his party except to get a lot of socialist utterances the freedom of the mails under the franking privilege.

Meyer London, the new Socialist, defeated Henry Goldfogle, a man to whom congressional life was very sweet. Goldfogle liked his job better than anything else. He was always working hard to be re-elected. In 1910 Goldfogle was as good as beaten by a Socialist candidate. Harry Loudenslager, who was running the Republican campaign in the east that year, learning that there was no hope for the Republican candidate, turned enough vote over to Goldfogle to save him. There was no Harry Loudenslager to turn the same trick this year.

REFERS TO EUROPEAN WAR

Miss Pankhurst Arouses Southern Suffrage Conference.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 12.—Citing the European war as "an instance of the danger and injustice of depriving women of the ballot," Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the English militant, aroused the closing session of the Southern states suffrage conference to an enthusiastic demonstration here.

At its closing business session the conference elected Miss Kate M. Gordon of New Orleans president, and Miss Laura Clay of Kentucky vice president at large, and allowed a declaration of principles to die in committee.

"Women are taking an increasing interest in international affairs," Miss Pankhurst told the conference. "The time has passed when men had a monopoly in understanding international questions. The European war is an instance."

ALLIES ARE AFTER HORSES

Montana Scoured for Mounts for War-ringing European Troopers.

Missoula, Mont., Nov. 12.—Montana horses are in great demand for the allied European troops and have advanced in value by leaps and bounds in all parts of the Treasure state. In the Beaverhead section, near Dillon, English buyers have paid as much as $75 a head for animals that were considered only fair range horses. A firm at Deer Lodge has signed a contract with the French buyers for the early delivery of 3,000 Montana horses. The order is the largest ever placed at one time in Montana. One owner in southern Montana has agreed to round up 1,000 animals that will meet the requirements of the French inspectors now in the state.

Crushed the Critic.

He was very deferential, but he was a deacon in the church, and he felt that he had a right to criticize.

"I hope you'll pardon me," he said, "if I suggest that your sermons are—ah!"

"Too prosy, I suppose," suggested the minister.
"Oh, no, not that, but too long."
"But you mustn't blame me for that," returned the minister pleasantly. "If you knew a little more I wouldn't have to tell you so much."—London Scraps.

Bullet Wounds.

The entrance wound caused by the modern small arm bullet is not a gruesome spectacle. It is small, and its appearance has been compared to that produced by the bite of a certain parasite insect. Often there is but little external bleeding, but this is not to be taken as a danger signal, as might be popularly supposed.—London Telegraph.

Soldering Aluminium.

When holes appear in aluminium utensils it is not necessary to discard the dishes as no longer useful, for by a simple method they can be made to take solder. Insert a brass or copper rivet in the hole, flatten both ends and then solder over both the inside and the outside surfaces in the usual manner. If you wish to solder a piece to a sound part of the utensil use a sharp awl to punch holes for holding spots of copper or brass. If the aluminium is very thick cut the holes with a small drill held in a carpenter's bit brace.

Washington's Farewell Address.
Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collusions of her friendships or enmities.

Got All He Asked For.
Another "meanest man" has been found. He lives in the city and conducts a thriving business. The other day a seedy individual approached him and said: "Say, mister, I'm hungry and would like to get a nickel to get a cup of coffee and a roll. I have four pennies and only need one more. Please give me a penny."

The man after searching himself said: "I haven't got a penny. All I have is a nickel. Give me your four cents in change, and I will give you the nickel."
The beggar requests that his name be not mentioned in connection with the item.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Father's Good Point.
Little Elizabeth had been offended in some way. She went off into a corner and turned her back on the family. "I'm mad," she exclaimed sulkily. "I wish I didn't have any father or mother."
"That's wrong, dear," said her mother. "We are the best friends you have."
"Well," said Elizabeth doubtfully, "I don't mind having father. He doesn't hang around here much, but I'm getting awful tired of the rest of you."—New York Times.

If Silicon Were a Gas.
Whistler at West Point seems to have had a sort of subconscious knowledge of his destiny, and this gave him an utter indifference to everything not consonant with it. Here he was a failure. A direct statement in a class recitation that "silicon is a gas" discouraged his chemical instructor and was one of the final blows to his military career. As Whistler said himself, if silicon had only been a gas he might have become a major general. But the fates were against it.

Globe Trotting.
The record trip around the world up to date is held by J. H. Mears. Commissioned by a New York newspaper, Mears left New York July 2, 1913, and completed the trip of 21,063 miles in 81 days, 21 hours and 35 minutes. The best previous time on a similar trip was 89 days, 19 hours and 42 minutes, by Jneger Schmidt, in 1911.—New York American.

GRATITUDE.
As gratitude is a necessary and a glorious, so also is it an obvious, a cheap and an easy virtue, so obvious that wherever there is life there is a place for it, so cheap that the covetous may be so grateful without expense and so easy that the sluggard may be so likewise without labor.

On the Defensive.
"Why," asked the simple stranger, "are people engaged in conducting a hotel so frequently distant or overbearing of manner?"
"Well," replied the clerk confidentially, "we're forced into a defensive attitude. There isn't a guest who doesn't honestly think he could improve on the way any hotel he stays at could be run."—Washington Star.

Hand-me-downs.
"I have to wear father's old clothes. I don't suppose you girls have any troubles like those."
"Yes, we do," said the girl. "I have to wear mother's old hair."—Kansas City Journal.

DISPEL THE GLOOM.
Surely happiness is reflective, like the brilliant light of heaven, and every countenance bright with smiles and glowing with innocent enjoyment is a mirror, transmitting to others the warning rays of a supreme and ever shining benevolence.—Washington Irving.

HEART INTEREST STORIES FROM BATTLEFIELDS IN EUROPE'S WAR

Mother Loses Three Sons. Survivor Tells How It Feels to Be Blown Up.
In Lull of Shots Girl Dances "Merry Widow" Waltz. Russia Bans Drinking.

CORRESPONDENTS at the front or marooned in obscure places while the great European conflict rages manage daily to get through the wary censors some little grimly humorous or tragic side lights of the war. Here are some of the latest and best that have come over the cables or by mail:

"This afternoon the young officer excelled himself," writes a correspondent of an English aviator. "An extremely well screened German battery was doing nasty work from behind a slight rise at the back of the German trenches. This was the air man's quarry. Up and up he went in quick climbing spirals, and when he was at a height of 2,000 feet he poised for a spell to spot the lurking place of the battery. His first signal was for the gunners to plant their shells immediately below him. They fired."

"The shells fell some distance to the right and did no more damage than to dismantle further an already dismantled camp."

"The air man next signaled to tell the range finders to swing their guns more to the left. Again it was too far. Again he signaled, and this time the first of the shells wrecked the timber of the foremost Prussian gun, smashing up horses and men alike. Instantly the air man indicated that the range had been found at last, and then shell after shell burst over and among the battery, which had been fogging the allies so mercilessly earlier in the day."

"In five minutes all that were left of the battery crew broke away from the cunning screen, in the making of which so much craft had been employed, and fled across country. General (name deleted), who had been watching this with tremendous interest through his field glasses, clapped his hands and danced to and fro along the veranda."

"Splendid! Magnificent!" he cried. "The best show I ever witnessed. That man must have a heart of steel in a body of iron."

"The general congratulated the laughing officer when he came down to Mother Earth once more, tired but still jubilant. He congratulated him and shook his hand."

"You're almost too good to last," he said. And the air man only laughed."

Too Late!

"In her house of general mourning Germany has scarcely one home untouched by war," writes a correspondent. "I heard of one story of gripping pathos. It was to do with a family named Von Konig, the father of which is a retired colonel."

"At the outbreak of the war he had three sons in the army. Immediately two younger sons joined the colors. In the first advance into France three sons were killed and a fourth was shot on the East Prussian frontier. The mother is little better than insane, and the father, a stern old Spartan, at last could stand it no longer. He obtained an audience with the kaiser and told his story, praying that the last of the five be spared."

"The kaiser was much moved by the story and ordered a message to be sent to the division to which the young man was attached, directing that he be sent to interior duty, away from the front. The old man, deeply touched, sought to thank the emperor."

"No," said the kaiser, "it is I and your country who must thank you for the terrible sacrifice you have made. You have done nobly, but at a great price."

"The colonel then went to the place where his boy was stationed. He was met by the commanding general and asked if the kaiser's command had been received."

"Yes," said the general, "I received the command, but before I could transmit the order the boy received another command. He was killed ten minutes before the message arrived."

Even Here!

The last number of the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag has just reached Paris and contains the following remarkable account of the amenities of trench life:

"The Germans and French are entrenched about 100 yards apart. By arrangement the fire ceases daily at lunch time. The Germans hold concerts nightly. Once when a phonograph was playing the 'Merry Widow' waltz a girl leaped from the French trenches and, advancing to the ground separating the adversaries, danced for a quarter of an hour, after which she returned to French coter, both sides applauding her ecstatically."

How It Feels to Be Blown Up.

This is from a letter written by a survivor of the Pathfinder, the British cruiser destroyed by a German submarine:

"My twenty-eighth birthday, and I believe I have had a good birthday present by having my skin saved whole. I got off unscathed but a few scratches on my legs. All the ship's company was in the fore part having tea; in fact, I was just going down to get mine. I saw a flash, and the ship seemed to lift right out of the water. Down went the mast and forward funnel and fore part of the ship, and all the men there must have been blown to atoms. 'Every man for himself' and I at once pulled off my boots, coat and trousers, and over I went. I think I broke all swimming records trying to put as much space between myself and the ship, being afraid of suction. When she sank something blew up, and on came the water, and round and round I went like a cork. A buoy came speeding by me, and I grabbed it, and that was what kept me afloat. There was a good sea running, and I believe I must have been in the water over an hour and was getting numbed with the cold when they picked me up."

The Brighter Side.

Life in the trenches appears by no means to be the irksome and dreadful thing it is reported to be. According to soldiers just back in Paris from the firing line, troops that are supposed to face each other grimly across a fire swept space only a few hundred yards wide are not the bloodthirsty fellows we all took them for.

They carry civility into their work, and certain conventions, all making for comfort, have been tacitly established between them. For example, toward midday both sides suspend fire in order that they may eat luncheon in peace. They would undoubtedly oblige each other when the evening meal is due but for the unhappy fact that the dinner hours of the contending armies do not tally.

Obviously, says a facetious Frenchman, it is somebody's duty to see that the meal hours of the opposing forces synchronize exactly.

Extra! Russia Goes Dry!

The official bulletin of the prefect of Petrograd published on Oct. 26 is another addition to the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic drinks. Up to that date restaurants of the first class had the privilege of selling vodka and all other spirituous liquors in unlimited quantities. It was thought these establishments would only provide for the wealthier classes, and there was no danger of the common people being able to secure strong drink. It seems, however, that habitual toppers even of the lower classes arrayed themselves in clothes finer than they had ever worn before in their lives and, putting up a bold front, have entered first class restaurants and got what they wanted.

The story goes that haters and milliners had been doing a rushing business selling derby hats to men and women who hitherto had worn caps and shawls. A derby on a man and a hat on a woman being in Russia a mark of superiority, if not of intelligence, there was no ban on champagne for the wearers.

This reached the ears of the commander in chief of the army, who has absolute powers. He accordingly instructed prefects of police throughout Russia to prohibit the sale of vodka and strong drink of every description even in first class restaurants.

Church Steeples' Part.

Church steeples play queer parts in war. Four weeks ago in Antwerp I saw a man climb almost to the peak of the ancient cathedral there and fasten the Belgian flag to a stone gargoyles, says an English correspondent. In the evening at sunset I saw Belgian choir boys standing in their white surplices among the bells and heard their song of praise that floated over the old town like a benediction—because Antwerp had been saved from a Zeppelin.

Tonight in Munich I saw another church steeple playing its part in war. It was raining, and the peak of the cathedral spire loomed dimly above the lights of the city hall square. But the tiny lights of candles carried by German choir boys fluttered in the belfry, and, led by an orchestra, the boys sang a song of praise—because Antwerp had fallen.

There are "sidewalk strategists" here too. "We'll get to London when the proper time comes," says my waiter. "You know how Germany fooled the world with her fifteen inch guns and her new submarines. Nobody knew she had such things. Well, we've got another trick up our sleeves. We've got guns that will shoot twenty-eight miles, and that's two miles more than the width of the English channel between Calais and Dover."

"As soon as we take Calais we will mount these big guns on granite foundations, shoot across the channel and demolish the forts at Dover. Then we will sink all the English ships within range of these guns, and we will keep a pathway clear across the channel to Dover. That way we can land all the German troops we need in England."

A German Mother's Letter.

Under the caption, "We Barbarians," the Frankfurter Zeitung of Sept. 29 publishes, as incompatible with the charges of cruelty and barbarity made against German by her enemies, the following letter written by a German mother to a French mother whose son died while a prisoner of war in Germany:

Dear Lady—A mother who, even as did you, saw her son march away into the war for the defense of his fatherland, a German mother, is writing this to you.

On Friday, Aug. 28, a great number of wounded French soldiers arrived here, of whom your son, Lucien Paul, was one. He had a severe wound in the head. He was taken tenderly to the hospital of the Sisters of Holy St. Vincent de Paul, where he was nursed with every care possible. One of our clergymen, Mgr. Hilpisch, who visited the wounded, was notified by the sisters that Herr Paul wished to make his confession. The monsignor found him, as he told me, very weak. Your dear son spoke with difficulty. He obtained absolution. As there seemed to be no immediate danger the priest wanted to administer the holy communion and extreme unction on the following day, in order not to fatigue your son too much. But at 3 o'clock a cramp seized your son, and at 4:30 o'clock he died without having regained consciousness. His brain had been badly injured.

You may rest assured, dear lady, that your beloved son was treated with every care and that nothing was neglected in efforts to save his young life. That may comfort you a little—your son and your husband—in your great sorrow. The thought that a priest was at his side in his last hour and that he died a holy death will help you bow your head under the hand of the highest Lord of life and death. Your son died as a hero for his fatherland and now rests, it is true, in strange, but in consecrated ground, where he awaits the resurrection and will meet again with those who now mourn him, never to leave them again.

His funeral took place on Tuesday, Sept. 1 amid the tolling of bells in the cathedral. He received all military honors. Our two war societies, with their flags draped in black crape, formed his escort of honor. There was a bright, blue sky above the open grave as the three salves of honor were fired.

I thought I might send you, as I do, herewith inclosed, a few twigs of the laurel wreath which the two war societies laid on his grave as well as several clippings from the local paper. You will see from these how much honor was paid to your dear son when he was carried to his final dwelling place. He rests in the new cemetery of our city. His grave bears the number 1.

Dear lady, I have been told that the sorely wounded young Frenchman wished above all to see his mother again. That wrung my heart so hard that I determined to write to his poor mother at once and to tell her all I could learn about the young soldier, for I, too, dear lady, have an only son, who has gone away, following with full enthusiasm the call of his kaiser, and since Aug. 22 we have heard no word of him.

This letter is to comfort you a little in your great sorrow, you and your whole family, for the great loss of your dear son, who gave up his young life for his fatherland. Accept, dear lady, the assurance of sincerest sympathy of a mother whose heart feels deeply for you.

"This letter," says the Zeitung, "is a document of German culture that can tell the foreign nations how, despite the war that has been forced upon us, Germany can still feel sentiments of deepest humanity. Our army is no band of mercenaries. The flower of our people serve in it. Even as a German mother has felt in this case so, too, do the sons of such mothers feel. In truth they are neither Huns nor barbarians."

Rather Too Light.

The landlady who had not a reputation for overfeeding her boarders asked her solitary boarder as he looked dolefully at his supper, "Shall I light the gas?"

The boarder gazed at the scanty meal and replied, "Well, no, it isn't necessary; the supper is light enough!"—London Telegraph.

Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

Russian officers are so recklessly brave, a Petrograd dispatch says, the czar has requested them to be more careful because he needs all their lives.

Paris is overrun not only with dogs and cats abandoned by their owners, but with animals that followed refugees into the city from Belgium and northern France.

A French soldier was sentenced to five years' labor on public works for refusing to obey a command to wash his feet in a stream when all the others in his command did.

Hugh Turner Salt of St. Louis asked the court to change his name to Turner. "Everybody I know gets too fresh with me," he said. "I'm the pun of St. Louis. At the office they yell at me to put more pepper into my work, and every time I go in swimming some alleged wit refers to the prospect for sea bathing."

NOTHING WARMS THE HEART OF THE PATIENT FISHERMAN LIKE THE PULL OF A TEN POUND PICKEREL!

OH YES THERE IS! A NIBBLE OF THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW.

THE FISHERMAN AND THE GOOD JUDGE

THE friendliest thing in the world is the little chew of "Right-Cut". It satisfies a man. Makes him wish all men knew the rich taste and solid comfort of the Real Tobacco Chew, and eager to pass the good word along. "Right-Cut" gives up its substance of full-bodied, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shreds so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

Washington's Farewell Address.
Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collusions of her friendships or enmities.

Got All He Asked For.
Another "meanest man" has been found. He lives in the city and conducts a thriving business. The other day a seedy individual approached him and said: "Say, mister, I'm hungry and would like to get a nickel to get a cup of coffee and a roll. I have four pennies and only need one more. Please give me a penny."

The man after searching himself said: "I haven't got a penny. All I have is a nickel. Give me your four cents in change, and I will give you the nickel."

The beggar requests that his name be not mentioned in connection with the item.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Father's Good Point.
Little Elizabeth had been offended in some way. She went off into a corner and turned her back on the family.

"I'm mad," she exclaimed sulkily. "I wish I didn't have any father or mother."

"That's wrong, dear," said her mother. "We are the best friends you have."

"Well," said Elizabeth doubtfully, "I don't mind having father. He doesn't hang around here much, but I'm getting awful tired of the rest of you."—New York Times.

If Silicon Were a Gas.
Whistler at West Point seems to have had a sort of subconscious knowledge of his destiny, and this gave him an utter indifference to everything not consonant with it. Here he was a failure. A direct statement in a class recitation that "silicon is a gas" discouraged his chemical instructor and was one of the final blows to his military career. As Whistler said himself, if silicon had only been a gas he might have become a major general. But the fates were against it.

Globe Trotting.
The record trip around the world up to date is held by J. H. Mears. Commissioned by a New York newspaper, Mears left New York July 2, 1913, and completed the trip of 21,063 miles in 81 days, 21 hours and 35 minutes. The best previous time on a similar trip was 39 days, 19 hours and 42 minutes, by Jaeger Schmidt, in 1911.—New York American.

GRATITUDE.
As gratitude is a necessary and a glorious, so also is it an obvious, a cheap and an easy virtue, so obvious that wherever there is life there is a place for it, so cheap that the covetous may be grateful without expense and so easy that the sluggish may be so likewise without labor.

On the Defensive.
"Why," asked the simple stranger, "are people engaged in conducting a hotel so frequently distant or overbearing of manner?"
"Well," replied the clerk confidently, "we're forced into a defensive attitude. There isn't a guest who doesn't honestly think he could improve on the way any hotel he stays at could be run."—Washington Star.

Hand-me-downs.
"I have to wear father's old clothes. I don't suppose you girls have any troubles like those."
"Yes, we do," said the girl. "I have to wear mother's old hair."—Kansas City Journal.

DISPEL THE GLOOM.
Surely happiness is reflective, like the brilliant light of heaven, and every countenance bright with smiles and glowing with innocent enjoyment is a mirror, transmitting to others the warning rays of a supreme and ever shining benevolence.—Washington Irving.

HEART INTEREST STORIES FROM BATTLEFIELDS IN EUROPE'S WAR

Mother Loses Three Sons.
Survivor Tells How it Feels to Be Blown Up.

CORRESPONDENTS at the front or marooned in obscure places while the great European conflict rages manage daily to get through the wary censors some little grimly humorous or tragic side lights of the war. Here are some of the latest and best that have come over the cables or by mail:

"This afternoon the young officer excelled himself," writes a correspondent of an English aviator. "An extremely well screened German battery was doing nasty work from behind a slight rise at the back of the German trenches. This was the air man's quarry. Up and up he went in quick climbing spirals, and when he was at a height of 2000 feet he poised for a spell to spot the lurking place of the battery. His first signal was for the gunners to plant their shells immediately below him. They fired.

"The shells fell some distance to the right and did no more damage than to dismantle further an already dismantled camp.

"The air man next signaled to tell the range finders to swing their guns more to the left. Again it was too far. Again he signaled, and this time the first of the shells wrecked the lumber of the foremost Prussian gun, smashing up horses and men alike. Instantly the air man indicated that the range had been found at last, and then shell after shell burst over and among the battery, which had been fogging the allies so mercilessly earlier in the day.

"In five minutes all that were left of the battery crew broke away from the cunning screen, in the making of which so much craft had been employed, and fled across country. General (name deleted), who had been watching this with tremendous interest through his field glasses, clapped his hands and danced to and fro along the veranda.

"Splendid! Magnificent!" he cried. "The best show I ever witnessed. That man must have a heart of steel in a body of iron."

"The general congratulated the laughing officer when he came down to Mother Earth once more, throb but still jubilant. He congratulated him and shook his hand.

"You're almost too good to last," he said. And the air man only laughed."

Too Late!
"In her house of general mourning Germany has scarcely one home untouched by war," writes a correspondent. "I heard of one story of gripping pathos. It was to do with a family named Von Kold, the father of which is a retired colonel.
"At the outbreak of the war he had three sons in the army. Immediately two younger sons joined the colors. In the first advance into France three sons were killed and a fourth was shot on the East Prussian frontier. The mother is little better than insane, and the father, a stern old Spartan, at last could stand it no longer. He obtained an audience with the kaiser and told his story, praying that the last of the five be spared.

"The kaiser was much moved by the story and ordered a message to be sent to the division to which the young man was attached, directing that he be sent to interior duty, away from the front. The old man, deeply touched, sought to thank the emperor.

"No," said the kaiser, "it is I and your country who must thank you for the terrible sacrifice you have made. You have done nobly, but at a great price."

"The colonel then went to the place where his boy was stationed. He was met by the commanding general and asked if the kaiser's command had been received.

"Yes," said the general, "I received the command, but before I could transmit the order the boy received another command. He was killed ten minutes before the message arrived."

Even Here!
The last number of the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag has just reached Paris and contains the following remarkable account of the amenities of trench life:
"The Germans and French are entrenched about 100 yards apart. By arrangement the fire ceases daily at lunch time. The Germans hold concerts nightly. Once when a phonograph was playing the 'Merry Widow' waltz a girl leaped from the French trenches and, advancing to the ground separating the adversaries, danced for a quarter of an hour, after which she returned to French cover, both sides applauding her ecstatically."

How It Feels to Be Blown Up.
This is from a letter written by a survivor of the Pathfinder, the British cruiser destroyed by a German submarine:

"My twenty-eighth birthday, and I believe I have had a good birthday present by having my skin saved whole. I got off unscathed bar a few scratches on my legs. All the ship's company was in the fore part having tea; in fact, I was just going down to get mine. I saw a flash, and the ship seemed to lift right out of the water. Down went the mast and forward funnel and fore part of the ship, and all the men there must have been blown to atoms. 'Every man for himself' and I at once pulled off my boots, coat and trousers, and over I went. I think I broke all swimming records trying to put as much space between myself and the ship, being afraid of suction. When she sank something blew up, and on came the water, and round and round I went like a cork. A buoy came speeding by me, and I grabbed it, and that was what kept me afloat. There was a good sea running, and I believe I must have been in the water over an hour and was getting numbed with the cold when they picked me up."

The Brighter Side.
Life in the trenches appears by no means to be the lonesome and dreadful thing it is reported to be. According to soldiers just back in Paris from the firing line, troops that are supposed to face each other grimly across a fire swept space only a few hundred yards wide are not the bloodthirsty fellows we all took them for.

They carry civility into their work, and certain conventions, all making for comfort, have been tacitly established between them. For example, toward midday both sides suspend fire in order that they may eat luncheon in peace. They would undoubtedly oblige each other when the evening meal is due but for the unhappy fact that the dinner hours of the contending armies do not tally.

Obviously, says a facetious Frenchman, it is somebody's duty to see that the meal hours of the opposing forces synchronize exactly.

Extra! Russia Goes Dry!

The official bulletin of the prefect of Petrograd published on Oct. 26 is an other addition to the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic drinks. Up to that date restaurants of the first class had the privilege of selling vodka and all other spirituous liquors in unlimited quantities. It was thought these establishments would only provide for the wealthier classes, and there was no danger of the common people being able to secure strong drink. It seems, however, that habitual toper even of the lower classes arrayed themselves in clothes finer than they had ever worn before in their lives and, putting up a bold front, have entered first class restaurants and got what they wanted.

The story goes that hatters and milliners had been doing a rushing business selling derby hats to men and women who hitherto had worn caps and shawls. A derby on a man and a hat on a woman being in Russia a mark of superiority, if not of intelligence, there was no ban on champagne for the wearers.

This reached the ears of the commander in chief of the army, who has absolute powers. He accordingly instructed prefects of police throughout Russia to prohibit the sale of vodka and strong drink of every description even in first class restaurants.

Church Steeples' Part.

Church steeples play queer parts in war. Four weeks ago in Antwerp I saw a man climb almost to the peak of the ancient cathedral there and fasten the Belgian flag to a stone gargoyle, says an English correspondent. There are "sidewalk strategists" here too. "We'll get to London when the proper time comes," says my waiter. "You know how Germany fooled the world with her fifteen inch guns and her new submarines. Nobody knew she had such things. Well, we've got another trick up our sleeves. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shreds so that you won't have to grind it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

Order to Observe Same Not Generally Known in City Until Today Noon

NO PROTESTS HAVE BEEN VOICED

City of Brainerd Recently Adopted Policy of Retrenchment in City Work

The order to close saloons November 30 was not generally known in Brainerd this morning. It was received quietly. When "Pussyfoot" Johnson closed the saloons December 6, 1910, in Brainerd there was no protest, no objections made, and the same course will be taken on this occasion. Saloon keepers of Brainerd will obey the laws to the letter as they did in 1910.

But recently the saloon license was lifted from $500 to $1,000 annually and the number of licenses was decreased on that account. The liquor men had about accustomed themselves to high license, when the Indian agency order clapped down.

Fearing the loss of saloon license revenue the city recently adopted a policy of retrenchment. Street work and other improvements were reduced. Nothing has been done in the way of improvements except what was absolutely necessary.

To the Voters of Crow Wing County: To you who voted and supported me for re-election to the office of Judge of Probate, I want to express my sincere thanks.

I shall endeavor to conduct the affairs of my office in such a manner that you will not regret your action. To you who did not support me, I love you just the same, and any business you may have in my department will receive my very best attention.

Yours respectfully,
J. T. SANBORN,

NEW STANDING COMMITTEE

Mons Mahlum Chairman of Chamber of Commerce Retail Trade and Business Committee

A FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

Keeping the Library Open Daily—Cheaper Power for Factories Suggested

Many matters of importance were brought to the attention of the members of the Chamber of Commerce last evening at their regular meeting. A report from the manufacturing committee was read outlining the effort which is being made to locate the American Specialty Co., manufacturers of cotton gloves and sanitary specialties. The factory when running at capacity will employ from ten to fifteen girls as well as a number of skilled cutters. It was stated that the factory was desirous of locating here to take advantage of the added railway and market facilities. At a later meeting the committee anticipates reporting that the concern has been established.

A communication from John S. Pardee, secretary of the state economy and efficiency commission, was read in which announcement was made that Hugh J. Hughes of Minneapolis, a member of the commission, would address the members on the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 18th. Mr. Pardee, the secretary, will accompany Mr. Hughes in anticipation of answering questions relative to the work of the commission. Mr. Hughes was one of the first men in this broad move and is well known here as being one of the hard workers in support of the various domain bills as well as for the measure for the improvement and reclamation of northern Minnesota lands. Mr. Pardee refers to him as one who knows his story from A to Zebra. It is hoped that every member with a friend will be in attendance to hear Mr. Hughes as his talk will be both interesting and educational.

Attention was called to the campaign which has been launched for new members. Two teams of ten or more members each are to be chosen from the membership which will be designated as the blue and red team. The one bringing the greatest number of members within a period of thirty days from a specified time are to be banqueted by their opponents. A communication was read by the secretary from H. W. Linnemann, clothier, which offered the individual member bringing in the greatest number of applications a pair of $5 shoes as an added incentive. It is predicted that the membership will be increased materially as a result of this campaign.

A report from the committee on committees recommended that an additional standing committee be appointed to consider all matters relating to the retail trade and business of the city and county. The following members were suggested for appointment: Mons Mahlum, P. J. Oberst, A. K. Lukens, H. A. Kaatz, K. S. Breckenberg, T. H. Shaefer, G. A. Beale, E. P. Slipp, F. M. Koop, Neils Johnson. On motion the appointments were ratified.

At the last regular meeting of the chamber attention was called to the necessity of maintaining an employment bureau as a department of the organization. Following this suggestion the house committee reported that they considered it highly advisable that the secretary establish such a bureau for clerical and professional or skilled labor making no charge to either party thereby avoiding the necessity of taking out a state license. The department will be maintained only for the convenience of the members and all inquiries for employment will be recorded and carried on file so that members requiring clerical or skilled help may call upon the secretary to furnish same.

Additional social features have been made a part of the club in the way of furnishing cribbage, checker and chess boards. Quite a number of requests have been received from enthusiasts of these games with the result that added equipment has been provided.

President Sheridan announced the following appointments to the special committee which he was requested to appoint at the last meeting for the purpose of taking up the matter of county fair in conjunction with the agricultural committee: J. M. Elder, chairman, C. A. Albright, A. J. Starr, L. M. Depue, Dr. J. A. Thabes.

A communication from the social service committee of the Brainerd Musical club was read as follows:

We, the social service committee of the Brainerd Musical club wish to call the attention of your honorable body to the fact that our public library is closed to the public—but for the very limited time of sixteen hours per week, and that Brainerd has the unenviable reputation of being the only town of its size in the state to furnish such inadequate library facilities.

We believe that an institution of this kind cannot possibly perform the social and educational service for which it was intended unless open to the public at least a part of each day. It is not available to the teachers and pupils for daily reference work; it does not encourage the regular use of the reading room and formation of studious habits; hence the teachers take little interest in instructing the children in the use of the library when met with closed doors so much of the time.

Our object in calling your attention to this matter at this time is with the hope that you will consider ways and means of changing existing conditions before the joint meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association and the Minnesota Crop Improvement association in December as Brainerd has already received much undesirable advertising because of its backwardness in this respect.

A deeper meaning for this request is our earnest desire to create the best possible environment for the youth of our city and we believe this to be a great step in that direction.

The committee: Miss Hannah Falconer, Mrs. W. J. Lowrie, Mrs. Maud L. Smith, Mrs. W. H. Gemmell, Mrs. W. C. Cobb, Irma C. Hartley, Celia M. Rowley and Mrs. N. H. Ingersoll. The communication was referred to the educational committee for immediate action.

A letter from the chairman of the advisory committee of the merchants and manufacturers of the state was read asking for the organization's support in the campaign shortly to be made against the minimum wage law. It was outlined that if the law is proven valid it would mean that every male minor would receive a minimum wage of $9.00 a week in cities of the first class and $8 a week in cities of the fourth class such as Brainerd. After considerable discussion the matter was referred to the retail trade committee for their consideration.

H. F. Michael called attention to the economic advantages which Brainerd might offer to new industries in the way of furnishing cheap power were it possible to convert the present available water power into electrical energy. This it was explained might be offered to prospective manufacturers at a very low rate. The matter was referred to

Their arrangements were quickly consummated. Coast agreeing to wait for Alan with his biplane in Van Cortlandt park from midnight till daybreak, prepared if need be to undertake a transcontinental flight.

Thereafter Mr. Law proceeded to rehabilitate himself in decent clothing and his own esteem; after bathing, he staid alone in his rooms, from a tray;

Shook Out a Trey of Hearts.

after dining he slept soundly for three hours—and may be thought to have earned at least that much rest through having been for four hours a passenger in a hydroaeroplane lost in fogs that wrapped Long Island and all the adjacent territory in an impenetrable shroud.

Nor had this been all. Leaving aside all that had led up to Alan's rescue by Coast: the forced landing of the hydroaeroplane for lack of fuel had taken place on the south shore of the Great South Bay; a search of hours had followed before a boat was found to convey Alan and the aviator to the mainland; and a motor run of several hours had followed that, conveying Coast to his Hempstead hangars and Alan on to his hotel in New York.

Another man would have needed twelve hours in bed at the least to compensate for such a day: Mr. Law awakened in a lamb-like temper when called at eleven-thirty.

At midnight he committed an act of burglary, calmly and with determination breaking his way into the house of Seneca Trine through the area windows and basement.

In this nefarious business nothing hindered and none opposed him. But for a single lighted window in the upper tier (but not, he noted, the window to Rose's bedroom) and one or two lights which he found burning dim in the kitchen offices and other servants' quarters on the lower floor he would have thought the house empty. The silence of an abandoned place informed it all—below the upper story, but he was not to be satisfied with such negative evidence: he explored the dwelling minutely, room by room, story by story, passing with little interest through apartments by every sign dedicated to the tendency of his mortal enemy, intent on one object only—to find Rose Trine, that one woman whom he loved, or else make sure she was not there.

He negotiated that last flight of steps which led to the topmost floor with extraordinary stealth, advised hereto by a sound, or rather a series of sustained sounds, which had theretofore been inaudible to him. Possibly they had not till then existed; possibly he had heard them when he found snoring in a chair outside a closed door had not fallen asleep and begun to snore until the moment when Alan set foot upon the lower step of that final ascent.

Turning the head of the stairs, Alan paused for a little, speculatively intent on this man who must somehow be disposed of before he might solve the secret of that shut and guarded door.

Aside from actual violence no solution offered to the puzzle—and violence was abruptly forced upon him. No sound warned him of the door that opened at his back as he stood watching the sleeping guard. A piercing shriek was the first intimation he received that his presence had been discovered. It served as well to move him instantly into action: a single glance overshooulder showed him the figure of a maid-servant in cap and gown, her mouth still wide and full of sound—and Alan fell upon the guard like a thunderbolt. The man had barely time to jump up and recognize the alarm; then a fist caught him on the point of his jaw, and he returned promptly to deep unconsciousness.

No time now for qualms of compunction on account of the savage ruthlessness of that blow: no time even to search the fellow for a key to the closed door; already the maid was taking the stairs in full flight and cry, four steps and a howl like a warlock's to every jump.

Backing off, Alan took a short run, know of you." "Give me one minute to find my coat and hat."

In less than that time she was at his side in the hallway.

The police entered by the front door as the two crept out of the area window.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Via Air Line.

Not once in the course of the next sixteen hours but a thousand times Alan questioned (and, it will readily be allowed, with all excuses) his sanity in permitting himself to be influenced to humor Judith's insistence and make her a party to this wild aerial cross-country dash.

Between whiles the plane flew fast and high, cutting a direct line, as the crow flies, athwart the eastern and western states.

Chicago they raised as a smudge on the northern horizon about one o'clock in the afternoon; thereafter some little time was lost in descents to ascertain the identity of the many railroad lines that criss-crossed the swimming landscape. Only at the third east did they succeed in picking up the line of the Santa Fe. And it was some hours later, though still daylight, when they picked up the special train, flying like a bunting across the levels.

There was scant room for doubt that it was the train they sought. Specialists are not common. Moreover Alan contrived with considerable difficulty to focus binoculars upon the rear platform of the car, and caught a fugitive glimpse of a white-coated figure with a black face that was watching the biplane in the same manner, that is, with glasses.

The man in the white coat, Alan assured himself, was positively Barcus. And hardly had he comforted himself with this assurance when his sardonic destiny struck the motor dumb.

In response to his look of dashed inquiry the aviator merely shook a weary head and muttered the words: "Engine trouble."

Swiftly the earth rose to receive the volplaning mechanism. Under Coast's admirable handling it settled down at most without a jar, on the outskirts of a city whose name Alan never learned.

Escape of Alan and Judith.

For the biplane was barely at a standstill before he was out and, reeling with the giddiness that affects men after long flights, making his way as best he might toward the manager's office connected with a trainyard immediately adjacent to the spot where they had come to earth.

Lavish disbursements of money won him his way against official protests that what he demanded was an impossibility. Within twenty minutes, leaving Coast to follow on when and as best he might, Alan and Judith were spinning through open country in the cab of an engine running light, with only clear track between it and the special.

The several hours that ensued before the rear lights of the special were brought to view were none too many for the task imposed upon Alan of overcoming the scruples of the engineer and fireman.

Another minute, and less than fifty feet separated the two—the special train and the light engine, both hurtling through the light at top speed.

With a word to the engineer Alan crept out along the side of the boiler, with only a greasy handrail and a narrow foothold between himself and what meant death, or something closely resembling it, should he be shaken off by the tearing wind and the swaying of the locomotive.

It seemed an hour before he worked himself up to the cowcatcher—now within four feet of the rear platform of the special.

On this last he could see a woman's figure indistinctly silhouetted against the light through the door, and beside her a man in a white coat, clinging for dear life to the knob of the door—holding it against the frantic efforts of some persons inside to tear it open.

Another hour of suspense dragged out—or such was the effect—while the light engine with intolerable slowness bridged those four scant feet.

At length it was feasible to attempt the thing. Rose (he could see her strained white face quite plainly now) was half over the rail of the car ahead, ready to jump.

His heart failed him. It was too hazardous a risk. He dared not let her take it.

Something very like a shot sounded from the train and something very like a bullet whistled past his cheek, and proved the signal for several more.

Strangely, that knowledge steadied his nerves. Straining forward and holding on to a bar so hot that it scorched his palm, he offered a hand to the girl on the rail.

Her hand fell confidently into it. She jumped. His arm wound round her as she landed on the platform of the cowcatcher. He heard her breathe his name, then hurriedly passed her between himself and the boiler to the footway at the side. The fireman was waiting there to help her. Alan turned his attention to Barcus.

To his dismay he found that the engine was losing ground. The space was widening rapidly as Barcus released the knob and threw himself over the rail.

By a miraculous, flying leap, the man accomplished that incredible feat and gained the platform.

An instant later ten feet separated the engine from the special, as the engineer applied the brakes.

And this he did none too soon: for at the same time Marrophat and another appeared on the rear platform and opened a hot, but, thanks to the widening distance, ineffectual fire.

The engine ground slowly to a halt as the rear lights of the special train swept from sight round a bend.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Light Engine.

Toward the close of that summer's day it was the whim of that arch-manager of theatricals whom men call Fate to stage an anticlimax in the midst of a vast and hilly expanse of desolate middle western country—a rude and rugged disk of earth which boasted no human tenancy within a circle of its far-flung horizon and was bisected, not neatly, rather irregularly, by the flowing double line of steel ribbons which marked the railroad's right of way over the old Santa Fe trail.

So much for the stage: the light effects were provided exclusively by the crimson and purple and gold of a portentous sunset; the properties employed were simply a special train and what is known as a light engine (meaning a locomotive unhandicapped by cars); audience there was none, if one except the actors—who were one and all far too deeply preoccupied with the interpretation of their several roles to be aware of the show.

They were not many in number: perhaps half a dozen aboard the special train—which was making away as fast as it could run toward the glory of the sunset; as many more aboard the light engine.

It was the engineer who started the trouble. After bringing his monster to a full pause, he turned upon his passengers and—not without plausible excuse—violently indicted Mr. Alan Law for abuse of his and his fireman's trustfulness. This the said fireman (climbing forward over the tender) vigorously applauded.

They had been engaged, both gentlemen asserted vigorously, for nothing more dangerous than a quick run across the prairies, in furtherance of the unspecified plans of Mr. Alan Law and his companion, Miss Judith Trine. After starting out, they had wickedly and maliciously been bribed by the said Law to put on speed and catch up with the special, in order that he might rescue from the latter a young woman, his bride-to-be and the sister of Miss Trine.

But—and here was the grievance—they hadn't bargained to be shot at with pistols. And precisely that out rage had been put upon them during and subsequent to the moment of rescue.

It was unhappy Mr. Barcus who precipitated the affair. This gentleman was suffering from a severe sprain to his sense of decent pride. In the service of Miss Rose Trine and her betrothed, Mr. Law, Barcus had blackened his face and hands to the hue of ebony and had earnestly himself in the garb of a Pullman porter, surrendering himself to humiliating service to those aboard the special, suffering their insolence and scorn without a murmur, but with the tides of wrath mounting ever higher in his bosom.

And now, when at length he had won his freedom from that ignominious servitude, it was only to be sworn at and vilified, as a common nigger, by railroad hands!

It was the fireman (to be just) who brought the row to a focus by a slighting reference to that "shiftless and misbegotten dinge."

He repented quite promptly. Mr. Barcus jumped for his throat with a bellow of rage. The brakeman leaped for his shovel and brandished it threateningly. Mr. Barcus made nothing of that: he closed in without hesitation and got the fireman by the throat, proceeding to shake the breath out of his body with the greatest good will and dispatch. In the course of this entertainment the fireman slipped on the cab platform, tread on nothing, and went over backwards, taking Mr. Barcus with him to the ballast.

At almost the same moment Mr. Law, attempting to restrain the engineer from going to the assistance of his fellow-worker, ducked in under a vicious swing for his chin, grappled with his foe, tripped him up—and went with his to the ground on the opposite side of the locomotive from that occupied by Mr. Barcus and the fireman.

For the next several seconds he was very busy indeed keeping his face out of the ballast. The engineer was a heavy man, but active and infuriated. He fought like a demon unchained. It was all very exciting. Mr. Law was even beginning to enjoy it when he heard a woman shriek. At the same instant revolvers began to pop.

Mr. Law released his foe almost as quickly as he was released. Both rose as one man, to find Judith Trine beside them, a little smile of excitement playing round her lips as she looked up the track and watched the special slow down to a stop—several persons on the back platform plying busy trigger-fingers all the while.

As these last threw open the platform gates and dropped to the ballast, still perforating the air with many bullets, Mr. Law, Miss Judith Trine, and that late belligerent, the engineer, turned simultaneously and sought the rear of the tender.

On the opposite side they found Rose Trine and Mr. Barcus standing uncertainly above the body of the fireman, who, it appeared, had stunned himself in falling and remained insensible.

The appearance of Law and Judith from behind the tender, closely pursued by the engineer, who was in turn closely pursued by gentlemen with revolvers, stirred Barcus and Rose to action. Alan passed him at a round pace, pausing only long enough to seize Rose and drag her with him toward the special. Judith flung him a phrase of well-meant advice in passing: "Come along, you simpleton—unless you want to be shot down where you stand!"

Mr. Barcus acted on that advice, as immediately as resentfully. Judith Trine was little before him at the steps of the Pullman: Mr. Law had already assisted Rose aboard. Mr. Barcus ungraciously gave place to the lady: his ingrained chivalry sorely strained by bullets that kicked among the ballast round his feet.

GET SHOT AND GET RICH.

Mexican Soldiers Willing to Stop Gold Bullets of the Yaquis.

It is not for their aseptic qualities that the Yaquis of Sonora, Mexico, are casting the gold precipitates recently captured from an American pack train into bullets, but because to them bullets are more valuable than gold. The Americans escaped when the Yaquis attacked the pack train, but several Mexican packers were killed. The fight occurred at Agua Nueva, a pumping station at La Colorado, about sixteen miles from there. The value of the gold amounted to $50,000.

It is reported that soldiers of the Mexican troops are exposing themselves unduly to the Yaquis' fire in the hope of clearing enough by the operation to pay the doctor and leave a net profit besides.

L. O. Cowan, who operated extensively in Mexican mines, says the Yaquis are expert manufacturers of powder and that they have been known to make up cartridges with match heads for caps.
